

In the early days of desktop publishing, you usually had only a few fonts at your disposal. The issues of font management and typeface selection were those only of graphic designers and traditional publishers. Using Times Italic here or Helvetica Bold there was as complicated as things could get (and this was also about the extent of the choices).

Today, however, it's another story. Advanced computers like the NeXT bring an unprecedented amount of power and capability to the desktop. With this power comes many more choices, including scores of fonts. It is not unusual for people using NeXT computers to have over 100 different fonts installed on a single machine. But with these increased choices come increased responsibilities and decisions. Typical users are expected to choose type with the skill and imagination of an expert and have to keep a familiarity with the nuances that distinguish all of these different fonts.

Vivid Publishing introduces TypeView, a perfect companion for any Desktop Publishing, Wordprocessing, or Illustration software package. TypeView lets you access and understand all aspects of fonts. TypeView allows you to quickly view the character set of a particular font, locate an unusual character, and copy and paste into your document. TypeView also allows you to try out strings or paragraphs of text in a number of families, styles and sizes.

Features include:

- Character Set Browsing,
- Paragraph Views,
- Lorem Ipsum Views,
- Bezier Inspection,
- Kerning Pair Information,
- Global Font Information
- On-line Help.

These feature allow you to quickly analyze text and access characters in your font file. TypeView works with the NeXT services framework and can be launched by opening .font files.

TypeView lets you spend more time being creative, imaginative and more resourceful. If you are an expert graphic designer, TypeView can bring out the subtleties of typefaces, details that are often hidden by the computer. Even if you have only a limited knowledge of typefaces, TypeView can greatly improve your access and control of typefaces and type attributes.
